		The following is an extract from the Jamaica Handbook (page 201) :- " The numbers from "A27" to "A78" inclusive were only in general use on British stamps for little over a year, namely, from the 1 March 1859 till about the end of May 1860; hence the reason why they are so difficult to obtain. " During the interregnum the postmasters laid aside their obliterations until stamps reappeared with the Colonial issue in November 1860, when they were again used by the same offices.' 'On the closure of three post offices, some numbers had to be re-allotted about 1 November 1862 (if not on that day)." Accordingly, all the post towns using the numbers from "A38" to "A59" inclusive were moved down the list one place or more, an effort being made to keep the list in alphabetical sequence as three new post offices had to be included. "The numbers from "A38" to "A59" inclusive were therefore used at a different office after November 1862 from what they had been before that date." As far as the obliterations "A38" to "A59" on pines are concerned, the chances of their having been used AFTER November 1862 are many times greater than before that date. In order to preserve continuity and uniformity it has, therefore, been assumed that, provided there is no evidence to the contrary, their use was after that date and they are lotted accordingly
