Postage rate increase to help boost reform

POSTMASTER GENERAL Dr Blossom O'Meally-Nelson, recently announced that new postage rates become effective August 3. In discussing the increases during a recent interview, PostCorp chairman Lance Hylton pointed out that the rates have not been increased since July 1, 2001, over three years ago, and have long been overtaken by inflation and other variables.

The new rates are still nowhere near to the cost of providing the service but will provide some additional revenue to help the postal reform process and thereby facilitate further increases in efficiency and revenue production, the two avenues by which the huge operating deficit will be eliminated.

The increase has been long overdue but the board and management decided that there needed to be a demonstrable improvement in the service provided before the increase was requested. It was also important to show that the other areas of potential revenue were being addressed. Both of these objectives have been achieved.

This rate increase will also assist Jamaica Post in gaining an advantage against the private 're-mailing' establishments that have been operating within Jamaica. The cost of sending a letter from the U.S. to an address in Jamaica or Trinidad is US$4.95 (J$301), while (even after the increase) it costs just J$30.00 to mail it within Jamaica and J$60 to mail it from Jamaica to Trinidad.

LOW RATES

Because Jamaican rates are so low 're-mailers' utilise a strategy whereby they collect mail sent from outside Jamaica and destined for addresses in Jamaica or other countries. These are brought into Jamaica in a suitcase or box duty-free as duty is only charged on items valuing over US$20. These items are then mailed to the address in Jamaica or overseas. This practice denies Jamaica Post of vital revenue which would be paid by the U.S. to Jamaica if the letters were sent into Jamaica by the proper route, and also causes Jamaica to have to pay the overseas destination that will receive the mail from us, instead of from the U.S. directly.

A sample of the new rates is set out below and an advertisement in today's Financial Gleaner gives more details. Members of the public may contact the Central Sorting Office for a copy of the entire listing, complete with weight categories, etc., for a small fee to recover the cost of production.
